

Nine Questions for A Solid Fulbright

Writing a solid Fulbright application is, on the face of it, a daunting task. As with any daunting task, you can make it manageable by breaking the big task into a series of smaller ones. You may find it helpful to use this graph to plot nine specific questions that make for a strong Fulbright application that links in with your

Is there anything about where you grew up that made you curious about the rest of the world?	Did you have a teacher/professor who challenged you to think globally?	Did you study overseas in high school or university? What opened your eyes during that time?
What about your undergraduate experiences have stood out to you?	What about your research topic or proposed MA programs interests you? (Research/study applicants only)	What about teaching English overseas interests you? (ETA applicants only)
Have you had an experience with a culture other than your own that made you feel uncomfortable? What was that experience like?	Why did you decide to pursue a Fulbright grant?	What about your upcoming Fulbright grant excites you the most?